

POLICING IN TAMESIDE

Greater Manchester Police Authority is an independent body which scrutinises and challenges the work of Greater Manchester Police to ensure the service delivered by the Force represents value for money for the people and visitors of Greater Manchester

GMPA IN ACTION

Each year my colleagues and I at Greater Manchester Police Authority set your police force challenging targets. The targets are always linked to priority areas which have been highlighted by you and a range of other important partners. Last year (2009/2010) those priorities fell in the areas of public confidence, customer service, crime such as burglary and serious violent crime. This year (2010/2011), similar issues emerged through consultation and the areas the Force is currently focused on are aimed at increasing public satisfaction, tackling antisocial behaviour, reducing vehicle crime, protecting vulnerable people and reducing burglary.

It's the Chief Constable's job to make sure the day-to-day policing of our City Region is focused in a way which makes sure these priority areas, and all the other elements of policing delivery, are covered. As a Police Authority, it's our role to make sure the Chief Constable is providing a good police service which is not only efficient and effective but also represents value for money.

We do this by robustly scrutinising and challenging every aspect of GMP and we've got a host of arrangements in place which help us do this. For example, in the area of burglary, the monthly performance sessions we have with chief officers provided us with an opportunity to challenge performance in this area when we felt it was unsatisfactory. The Force responded with a range of measures including dedicated operations and performance improved. Our regular committee meetings are another important tier of our arrangements because they allow us to look at a particular issue in depth. This often leads to changes being made in the way the Force does things so you receive a better, value for money service in areas such as call handling.

This is just a snapshot of some of the ways your Police Authority is working on your behalf to ensure you receive a continuously improving police service. We use a range of measures to gauge our effectiveness and although statistics relating to performance only provide one viewpoint, they can be helpful in providing a focus and driving improvements.

Last year (2009/2010), of the 13 targets we set for the Force, six were met, four were within 10% of being met and three were missed. These facts and figures helped us identify areas where improvement was needed and this year it's a completely different story. GMP is on track to meet every one of its targets and just recently Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabularies praised GMP for its performance. I hope you agree, that's certainly something to feel proud of.

GMPA Chairman
Cllr Paul Murphy

For detailed information about GMP performance visit www.gmp.police.uk

MONEY MATTERS

Did you know GMPA is responsible for the police budget in Greater Manchester? This means the Authority decides how much council tax local people should pay for policing and has the final say on how the police budget can be used. This is an extremely important role and in recent years it has seen the Authority provide new police buildings, extra officers in neighbourhoods and increased investment in serious and organised crime.

Similar to many other public sector organisations, GMPA and GMP are facing significant budget pressures over the next four years. Around £134m of savings must be made and all areas of business are feeling the impact.

The largest cost for the Force is that of people, police officers and police staff, and inevitably, the only way savings on such a massive scale can be made is through a reduction in posts and job losses in addition to changing the way we work and how we do things so efficiencies are made.

Understandably, this is difficult not only for the staff and officers affected but also local people. This is something the Authority and Force do not underestimate and at all times, as workforce development plans evolve and adapt, protecting the frontline remains paramount.

YOUR GMPA

GMPA is made up of 19 Members. Ten Members are elected local councillors, one from each district in Greater Manchester. Nine are Independent Members who are recruited and appointed by the Police Authority. Cllr Joe Kitchen is the GMPA Elected Member for Tameside.

For a full list of GMPA Members or to find out more about the Authority visit www.gmpa.gov.uk or

Write to: GMPA
Salford Civic Centre
Chorley Road
Swinton
M27 5DA

Email: info@gmpa.gov.uk

Phone: 0161 793 3127

POLICING IN STOCKPORT

Greater Manchester Police Authority is an independent body which scrutinises and challenges the work of Greater Manchester Police to ensure the service delivered by the Force represents value for money for the people and visitors of Greater Manchester

GMPA IN ACTION

Each year my colleagues and I at Greater Manchester Police Authority set your police force challenging targets. The targets are always linked to priority areas which have been highlighted by you and a range of other important partners. Last year (2009/2010) those priorities fell in the areas of public confidence, customer service, crime such as burglary and serious violent crime. This year (2010/2011), similar issues emerged through consultation and the areas the Force is currently focused on are aimed at increasing public satisfaction, tackling antisocial behaviour, reducing vehicle crime, protecting vulnerable people and reducing burglary.

It's the Chief Constable's job to make sure the day-to-day policing of our City Region is focused in a way which makes sure these priority areas, and all the other elements of policing delivery, are covered. As a Police Authority, it's our role to make sure the Chief Constable is providing a good police service which is not only efficient and effective but also represents value for money.

We do this by robustly scrutinising and challenging every aspect of GMP and we've got a host of arrangements in place which help us do this. For example, in the area of burglary, the monthly performance sessions we have with chief officers provided us with an opportunity to challenge performance in this area when we felt it was unsatisfactory. The Force responded with a range of measures including dedicated operations and performance improved. Our regular committee meetings are another important tier of our arrangements because they allow us to look at a particular issue in depth. This often leads to changes being made in the way the Force does things so you receive a better, value for money service in areas such as call handling.

This is just a snapshot of some of the ways your Police Authority is working on your behalf to ensure you receive a continuously improving police service. We use a range of measures to gauge our effectiveness and although statistics relating to performance only provide one viewpoint, they can be helpful in providing a focus and driving improvements.

Last year (2009/2010), of the 13 targets we set for the Force, six were met, four were within 10% of being met and three were missed. These facts and figures helped us identify areas where improvement was needed and this year it's a completely different story. GMP is on track to meet every one of its targets and just recently Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabularies praised GMP for its performance. I hope you agree, that's certainly something to feel proud of.

GMPA Chairman
Cllr Paul Murphy

For detailed information about GMP performance visit www.gmp.police.uk

MONEY MATTERS

Did you know GMPA is responsible for the police budget in Greater Manchester? This means the Authority decides how much council tax local people should pay for policing and has the final say on how the police budget can be used. This is an extremely important role and in recent years it has seen the Authority provide new police buildings, extra officers in neighbourhoods and increased investment in serious and organised crime.

Similar to many other public sector organisations, GMPA and GMP are facing significant budget pressures over the next four years. Around £134m of savings must be made and all areas of business are feeling the impact.

The largest cost for the Force is that of people, police officers and police staff, and inevitably, the only way savings on such a massive scale can be made is through a reduction in posts and job losses in addition to changing the way we work and how we do things so efficiencies are made.

Understandably, this is difficult not only for the staff and officers affected but also local people. This is something the Authority and Force do not underestimate and at all times, as workforce development plans evolve and adapt, protecting the frontline remains paramount.

YOUR GMPA

GMPA is made up of 19 Members. Ten Members are elected local councillors, one from each district in Greater Manchester. Nine are Independent Members who are recruited and appointed by the Police Authority. Cllr Dave Goddard is the GMPA Elected Member for Stockport.

For a full list of GMPA Members or to find out more about the Authority visit www.gmpa.gov.uk or

Write to: GMPA
Salford Civic Centre
Chorley Road
Swinton
M27 5DA

Email: info@gmpa.gov.uk

Phone: 0161 793 3127

POLICING IN BOLTON

Greater Manchester Police Authority is an independent body which scrutinises and challenges the work of Greater Manchester Police to ensure the service delivered by the Force represents value for money for the people and visitors of Greater Manchester

GMPA IN ACTION

Each year my colleagues and I at Greater Manchester Police Authority set your police force challenging targets. The targets are always linked to priority areas which have been highlighted by you and a range of other important partners. Last year (2009/2010) those priorities fell in the areas of public confidence, customer service, crime such as burglary and serious violent crime. This year (2010/2011), similar issues emerged through consultation and the areas the Force is currently focused on are aimed at increasing public satisfaction, tackling antisocial behaviour, reducing vehicle crime, protecting vulnerable people and reducing burglary.

It's the Chief Constable's job to make sure the day-to-day policing of our City Region is focused in a way which makes sure these priority areas, and all the other elements of policing delivery, are covered. As a Police Authority, it's our role to make sure the Chief Constable is providing a good police service which is not only efficient and effective but also represents value for money.

We do this by robustly scrutinising and challenging every aspect of GMP and we've got a host of arrangements in place which help us do this. For example, in the area of burglary, the monthly performance sessions we have with chief officers provided us with an opportunity to challenge performance in this area when we felt it was unsatisfactory. The Force responded with a range of measures including dedicated operations and performance improved. Our regular committee meetings are another important tier of our arrangements because they allow us to look at a particular issue in depth. This often leads to changes being made in the way the Force does things so you receive a better, value for money service in areas such as call handling.

This is just a snapshot of some of the ways your Police Authority is working on your behalf to ensure you receive a continuously improving police service. We use a range of measures to gauge our effectiveness and although statistics relating to performance only provide one viewpoint, they can be helpful in providing a focus and driving improvements.

Last year (2009/2010), of the 13 targets we set for the Force, six were met, four were within 10% of being met and three were missed. These facts and figures helped us identify areas where improvement was needed and this year it's a completely different story. GMP is on track to meet every one of its targets and just recently Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabularies praised GMP for its performance. I hope you agree, that's certainly something to feel proud of.

GMPA Chairman
Cllr Paul Murphy

For detailed information about GMP performance visit www.gmp.police.uk

MONEY MATTERS

Did you know GMPA is responsible for the police budget in Greater Manchester? This means the Authority decides how much council tax local people should pay for policing and has the final say on how the police budget can be used. This is an extremely important role and in recent years it has seen the Authority provide new police buildings, extra officers in neighbourhoods and increased investment in serious and organised crime.

Similar to many other public sector organisations, GMPA and GMP are facing significant budget pressures over the next four years. Around £134m of savings must be made and all areas of business are feeling the impact.

The largest cost for the Force is that of people, police officers and police staff, and inevitably, the only way savings on such a massive scale can be made is through a reduction in posts and job losses in addition to changing the way we work and how we do things so efficiencies are made.

Understandably, this is difficult not only for the staff and officers affected but also local people. This is something the Authority and Force do not underestimate and at all times, as workforce development plans evolve and adapt, protecting the frontline remains paramount.

YOUR GMPA

GMPA is made up of 19 Members. Ten Members are elected local councillors, one from each district in Greater Manchester. Nine are Independent Members who are recruited and appointed by the Police Authority. Cllr Noel Spencer is the GMPA Elected Member for Bolton.

For a full list of GMPA Members or to find out more about the Authority visit www.gmpa.gov.uk or

Write to: GMPA
Salford Civic Centre
Chorley Road
Swinton
M27 5DA

Email: info@gmpa.gov.uk

Phone: 0161 793 3127

POLICING IN WIGAN

Greater Manchester Police Authority is an independent body which scrutinises and challenges the work of Greater Manchester Police to ensure the service delivered by the Force represents value for money for the people and visitors of Greater Manchester

GMPA IN ACTION

Each year my colleagues and I at Greater Manchester Police Authority set your police force challenging targets. The targets are always linked to priority areas which have been highlighted by you and a range of other important partners. Last year (2009/2010) those priorities fell in the areas of public confidence, customer service, crime such as burglary and serious violent crime. This year (2010/2011), similar issues emerged through consultation and the areas the Force is currently focused on are aimed at increasing public satisfaction, tackling antisocial behaviour, reducing vehicle crime, protecting vulnerable people and reducing burglary.

It's the Chief Constable's job to make sure the day-to-day policing of our City Region is focused in a way which makes sure these priority areas, and all the other elements of policing delivery, are covered. As a Police Authority, it's our role to make sure the Chief Constable is providing a good police service which is not only efficient and effective but also represents value for money.

We do this by robustly scrutinising and challenging every aspect of GMP and we've got a host of arrangements in place which help us do this. For example, in the area of burglary, the monthly performance sessions we have with chief officers provided us with an opportunity to challenge performance in this area when we felt it was unsatisfactory. The Force responded with a range of measures including dedicated operations and performance improved. Our regular committee meetings are another important tier of our arrangements because they allow us to look at a particular issue in depth. This often leads to changes being made in the way the Force does things so you receive a better, value for money service in areas such as call handling.

This is just a snapshot of some of the ways your Police Authority is working on your behalf to ensure you receive a continuously improving police service. We use a range of measures to gauge our effectiveness and although statistics relating to performance only provide one viewpoint, they can be helpful in providing a focus and driving improvements.

Last year (2009/2010), of the 13 targets we set for the Force, six were met, four were within 10% of being met and three were missed. These facts and figures helped us identify areas where improvement was needed and this year it's a completely different story. GMP is on track to meet every one of its targets and just recently Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabularies praised GMP for its performance. I hope you agree, that's certainly something to feel proud of.

GMPA Chairman
Cllr Paul Murphy

For detailed information about GMP performance visit www.gmp.police.uk

MONEY MATTERS

Did you know GMPA is responsible for the police budget in Greater Manchester? This means the Authority decides how much council tax local people should pay for policing and has the final say on how the police budget can be used. This is an extremely important role and in recent years it has seen the Authority provide new police buildings, extra officers in neighbourhoods and increased investment in serious and organised crime.

Similar to many other public sector organisations, GMPA and GMP are facing significant budget pressures over the next four years. Around £134m of savings must be made and all areas of business are feeling the impact.

The largest cost for the Force is that of people, police officers and police staff, and inevitably, the only way savings on such a massive scale can be made is through a reduction in posts and job losses in addition to changing the way we work and how we do things so efficiencies are made.

Understandably, this is difficult not only for the staff and officers affected but also local people. This is something the Authority and Force do not underestimate and at all times, as workforce development plans evolve and adapt, protecting the frontline remains paramount.

YOUR GMPA

GMPA is made up of 19 Members. Ten Members are elected local councillors, one from each district in Greater Manchester. Nine are Independent Members who are recruited and appointed by the Police Authority. Cllr Charles Rigby is the GMPA Elected Member for Wigan.

For a full list of GMPA Members or to find out more about the Authority visit www.gmpa.gov.uk or

Write to: GMPA
Salford Civic Centre
Chorley Road
Swinton
M27 5DA

Email: info@gmpa.gov.uk

Phone: 0161 793 3127

POLICING IN TRAFFORD

Greater Manchester Police Authority is an independent body which scrutinises and challenges the work of Greater Manchester Police to ensure the service delivered by the Force represents value for money for the people and visitors of Greater Manchester

GMPA IN ACTION

Each year my colleagues and I at Greater Manchester Police Authority set your police force challenging targets. The targets are always linked to priority areas which have been highlighted by you and a range of other important partners. Last year (2009/2010) those priorities fell in the areas of public confidence, customer service, crime such as burglary and serious violent crime. This year (2010/2011), similar issues emerged through consultation and the areas the Force is currently focused on are aimed at increasing public satisfaction, tackling antisocial behaviour, reducing vehicle crime, protecting vulnerable people and reducing burglary.

It's the Chief Constable's job to make sure the day-to-day policing of our City Region is focused in a way which makes sure these priority areas, and all the other elements of policing delivery, are covered. As a Police Authority, it's our role to make sure the Chief Constable is providing a good police service which is not only efficient and effective but also represents value for money.

We do this by robustly scrutinising and challenging every aspect of GMP and we've got a host of arrangements in place which help us do this. For example, in the area of burglary, the monthly performance sessions we have with chief officers provided us with an opportunity to challenge performance in this area when we felt it was unsatisfactory. The Force responded with a range of measures including dedicated operations and performance improved. Our regular committee meetings are another important tier of our arrangements because they allow us to look at a particular issue in depth. This often leads to changes being made in the way the Force does things so you receive a better, value for money service in areas such as call handling.

This is just a snapshot of some of the ways your Police Authority is working on your behalf to ensure you receive a continuously improving police service. We use a range of measures to gauge our effectiveness and although statistics relating to performance only provide one viewpoint, they can be helpful in providing a focus and driving improvements.

Last year (2009/2010), of the 13 targets we set for the Force, six were met, four were within 10% of being met and three were missed. These facts and figures helped us identify areas where improvement was needed and this year it's a completely different story. GMP is on track to meet every one of its targets and just recently Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabularies praised GMP for its performance. I hope you agree, that's certainly something to feel proud of.

GMPA Chairman
Cllr Paul Murphy

For detailed information about GMP performance visit www.gmp.police.uk

MONEY MATTERS

Did you know GMPA is responsible for the police budget in Greater Manchester? This means the Authority decides how much council tax local people should pay for policing and has the final say on how the police budget can be used. This is an extremely important role and in recent years it has seen the Authority provide new police buildings, extra officers in neighbourhoods and increased investment in serious and organised crime.

Similar to many other public sector organisations, GMPA and GMP are facing significant budget pressures over the next four years. Around £134m of savings must be made and all areas of business are feeling the impact.

The largest cost for the Force is that of people, police officers and police staff, and inevitably, the only way savings on such a massive scale can be made is through a reduction in posts and job losses in addition to changing the way we work and how we do things so efficiencies are made.

Understandably, this is difficult not only for the staff and officers affected but also local people. This is something the Authority and Force do not underestimate and at all times, as workforce development plans evolve and adapt, protecting the frontline remains paramount.

YOUR GMPA

GMPA is made up of 19 Members. Ten Members are elected local councillors, one from each district in Greater Manchester. Nine are Independent Members who are recruited and appointed by the Police Authority. Cllr Bernard Sharp is the GMPA Elected Member for Trafford.

For a full list of GMPA Members or to find out more about the Authority visit www.gmpa.gov.uk or

Write to: GMPA
Salford Civic Centre
Chorley Road
Swinton
M27 5DA

Email: info@gmpa.gov.uk

Phone: 0161 793 3127

POLICING IN BURY

Greater Manchester Police Authority is an independent body which scrutinises and challenges the work of Greater Manchester Police to ensure the service delivered by the Force represents value for money for the people and visitors of Greater Manchester

GMPA IN ACTION

Each year my colleagues and I at Greater Manchester Police Authority set your police force challenging targets. The targets are always linked to priority areas which have been highlighted by you and a range of other important partners. Last year (2009/2010) those priorities fell in the areas of public confidence, customer service, crime such as burglary and serious violent crime. This year (2010/2011), similar issues emerged through consultation and the areas the Force is currently focused on are aimed at increasing public satisfaction, tackling antisocial behaviour, reducing vehicle crime, protecting vulnerable people and reducing burglary.

It's the Chief Constable's job to make sure the day-to-day policing of our City Region is focused in a way which makes sure these priority areas, and all the other elements of policing delivery, are covered. As a Police Authority, it's our role to make sure the Chief Constable is providing a good police service which is not only efficient and effective but also represents value for money.

We do this by robustly scrutinising and challenging every aspect of GMP and we've got a host of arrangements in place which help us do this. For example, in the area of burglary, the monthly performance sessions we have with chief officers provided us with an opportunity to challenge performance in this area when we felt it was unsatisfactory. The Force responded with a range of measures including dedicated operations and performance improved. Our regular committee meetings are another important tier of our arrangements because they allow us to look at a particular issue in depth. This often leads to changes being made in the way the Force does things so you receive a better, value for money service in areas such as call handling.

This is just a snapshot of some of the ways your Police Authority is working on your behalf to ensure you receive a continuously improving police service. We use a range of measures to gauge our effectiveness and although statistics relating to performance only provide one viewpoint, they can be helpful in providing a focus and driving improvements.

Last year (2009/2010), of the 13 targets we set for the Force, six were met, four were within 10% of being met and three were missed. These facts and figures helped us identify areas where improvement was needed and this year it's a completely different story. GMP is on track to meet every one of its targets and just recently Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabularies praised GMP for its performance. I hope you agree, that's certainly something to feel proud of.

GMPA Chairman
Cllr Paul Murphy

For detailed information about GMP performance visit www.gmp.police.uk

MONEY MATTERS

Did you know GMPA is responsible for the police budget in Greater Manchester? This means the Authority decides how much council tax local people should pay for policing and has the final say on how the police budget can be used. This is an extremely important role and in recent years it has seen the Authority provide new police buildings, extra officers in neighbourhoods and increased investment in serious and organised crime.

Similar to many other public sector organisations, GMPA and GMP are facing significant budget pressures over the next four years. Around £134m of savings must be made and all areas of business are feeling the impact.

The largest cost for the Force is that of people, police officers and police staff, and inevitably, the only way savings on such a massive scale can be made is through a reduction in posts and job losses in addition to changing the way we work and how we do things so efficiencies are made.

Understandably, this is difficult not only for the staff and officers affected but also local people. This is something the Authority and Force do not underestimate and at all times, as workforce development plans evolve and adapt, protecting the frontline remains paramount.

YOUR GMPA

GMPA is made up of 19 Members. Ten Members are elected local councillors, one from each district in Greater Manchester. Nine are Independent Members who are recruited and appointed by the Police Authority. Cllr Sam Cohen is the GMPA Elected Member for Bury.

For a full list of GMPA Members or to find out more about the Authority visit www.gmpa.gov.uk or

Write to: GMPA
Salford Civic Centre
Chorley Road
Swinton
M27 5DA

Email: info@gmpa.gov.uk

Phone: 0161 793 3127

POLICING IN ROCHDALE

Greater Manchester Police Authority is an independent body which scrutinises and challenges the work of Greater Manchester Police to ensure the service delivered by the Force represents value for money for the people and visitors of Greater Manchester

GMPA IN ACTION

Each year my colleagues and I at Greater Manchester Police Authority set your police force challenging targets. The targets are always linked to priority areas which have been highlighted by you and a range of other important partners. Last year (2009/2010) those priorities fell in the areas of public confidence, customer service, crime such as burglary and serious violent crime. This year (2010/2011), similar issues emerged through consultation and the areas the Force is currently focused on are aimed at increasing public satisfaction, tackling antisocial behaviour, reducing vehicle crime, protecting vulnerable people and reducing burglary.

It's the Chief Constable's job to make sure the day-to-day policing of our City Region is focused in a way which makes sure these priority areas, and all the other elements of policing delivery, are covered. As a Police Authority, it's our role to make sure the Chief Constable is providing a good police service which is not only efficient and effective but also represents value for money.

We do this by robustly scrutinising and challenging every aspect of GMP and we've got a host of arrangements in place which help us do this. For example, in the area of burglary, the monthly performance sessions we have with chief officers provided us with an opportunity to challenge performance in this area when we felt it was unsatisfactory. The Force responded with a range of measures including dedicated operations and performance improved. Our regular committee meetings are another important tier of our arrangements because they allow us to look at a particular issue in depth. This often leads to changes being made in the way the Force does things so you receive a better, value for money service in areas such as call handling.

This is just a snapshot of some of the ways your Police Authority is working on your behalf to ensure you receive a continuously improving police service. We use a range of measures to gauge our effectiveness and although statistics relating to performance only provide one viewpoint, they can be helpful in providing a focus and driving improvements.

Last year (2009/2010), of the 13 targets we set for the Force, six were met, four were within 10% of being met and three were missed. These facts and figures helped us identify areas where improvement was needed and this year it's a completely different story. GMP is on track to meet every one of its targets and just recently Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabularies praised GMP for its performance. I hope you agree, that's certainly something to feel proud of.

GMPA Chairman
Cllr Paul Murphy

For detailed information about GMP performance visit www.gmp.police.uk

MONEY MATTERS

Did you know GMPA is responsible for the police budget in Greater Manchester? This means the Authority decides how much council tax local people should pay for policing and has the final say on how the police budget can be used. This is an extremely important role and in recent years it has seen the Authority provide new police buildings, extra officers in neighbourhoods and increased investment in serious and organised crime.

Similar to many other public sector organisations, GMPA and GMP are facing significant budget pressures over the next four years. Around £134m of savings must be made and all areas of business are feeling the impact.

The largest cost for the Force is that of people, police officers and police staff, and inevitably, the only way savings on such a massive scale can be made is through a reduction in posts and job losses in addition to changing the way we work and how we do things so efficiencies are made.

Understandably, this is difficult not only for the staff and officers affected but also local people. This is something the Authority and Force do not underestimate and at all times, as workforce development plans evolve and adapt, protecting the frontline remains paramount.

YOUR GMPA

GMPA is made up of 19 Members. Ten Members are elected local councillors, one from each district in Greater Manchester. Nine are Independent Members who are recruited and appointed by the Police Authority. Cllr Pat Colclough is the GMPA Elected Member for Rochdale.

For a full list of GMPA Members or to find out more about the Authority visit www.gmpa.gov.uk or

Write to: GMPA
Salford Civic Centre
Chorley Road
Swinton
M27 5DA

Email: info@gmpa.gov.uk

Phone: 0161 793 3127

POLICING IN OLDHAM

Greater Manchester Police Authority is an independent body which scrutinises and challenges the work of Greater Manchester Police to ensure the service delivered by the Force represents value for money for the people and visitors of Greater Manchester

GMPA IN ACTION

Each year my colleagues and I at Greater Manchester Police Authority set your police force challenging targets. The targets are always linked to priority areas which have been highlighted by you and a range of other important partners. Last year (2009/2010) those priorities fell in the areas of public confidence, customer service, crime such as burglary and serious violent crime. This year (2010/2011), similar issues emerged through consultation and the areas the Force is currently focused on are aimed at increasing public satisfaction, tackling antisocial behaviour, reducing vehicle crime, protecting vulnerable people and reducing burglary.

It's the Chief Constable's job to make sure the day-to-day policing of our City Region is focused in a way which makes sure these priority areas, and all the other elements of policing delivery, are covered. As a Police Authority, it's our role to make sure the Chief Constable is providing a good police service which is not only efficient and effective but also represents value for money.

We do this by robustly scrutinising and challenging every aspect of GMP and we've got a host of arrangements in place which help us do this. For example, in the area of burglary, the monthly performance sessions we have with chief officers provided us with an opportunity to challenge performance in this area when we felt it was unsatisfactory. The Force responded with a range of measures including dedicated operations and performance improved. Our regular committee meetings are another important tier of our arrangements because they allow us to look at a particular issue in depth. This often leads to changes being made in the way the Force does things so you receive a better, value for money service in areas such as call handling.

This is just a snapshot of some of the ways your Police Authority is working on your behalf to ensure you receive a continuously improving police service. We use a range of measures to gauge our effectiveness and although statistics relating to performance only provide one viewpoint, they can be helpful in providing a focus and driving improvements.

Last year (2009/2010), of the 13 targets we set for the Force, six were met, four were within 10% of being met and three were missed. These facts and figures helped us identify areas where improvement was needed and this year it's a completely different story. GMP is on track to meet every one of its targets and just recently Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabularies praised GMP for its performance. I hope you agree, that's certainly something to feel proud of.

GMPA Chairman
Cllr Paul Murphy

For detailed information about GMP performance visit www.gmp.police.uk

MONEY MATTERS

Did you know GMPA is responsible for the police budget in Greater Manchester? This means the Authority decides how much council tax local people should pay for policing and has the final say on how the police budget can be used. This is an extremely important role and in recent years it has seen the Authority provide new police buildings, extra officers in neighbourhoods and increased investment in serious and organised crime.

Similar to many other public sector organisations, GMPA and GMP are facing significant budget pressures over the next four years. Around £134m of savings must be made and all areas of business are feeling the impact.

The largest cost for the Force is that of people, police officers and police staff, and inevitably, the only way savings on such a massive scale can be made is through a reduction in posts and job losses in addition to changing the way we work and how we do things so efficiencies are made.

Understandably, this is difficult not only for the staff and officers affected but also local people. This is something the Authority and Force do not underestimate and at all times, as workforce development plans evolve and adapt, protecting the frontline remains paramount.

YOUR GMPA

GMPA is made up of 19 Members. Ten Members are elected local councillors, one from each district in Greater Manchester. Nine are Independent Members who are recruited and appointed by the Police Authority. Cllr Keith Pendlebury is the GMPA Elected Member for Oldham.

For a full list of GMPA Members or to find out more about the Authority visit www.gmpa.gov.uk or

Write to: GMPA
Salford Civic Centre
Chorley Road
Swinton
M27 5DA

Email: info@gmpa.gov.uk

Phone: 0161 793 3127

POLICING IN MANCHESTER

Greater Manchester Police Authority is an independent body which scrutinises and challenges the work of Greater Manchester Police to ensure the service delivered by the Force represents value for money for the people and visitors of Greater Manchester

GMPA IN ACTION

Each year my colleagues and I at Greater Manchester Police Authority set your police force challenging targets. The targets are always linked to priority areas which have been highlighted by you and a range of other important partners. Last year (2009/2010) those priorities fell in the areas of public confidence, customer service, crime such as burglary and serious violent crime. This year (2010/2011), similar issues emerged through consultation and the areas the Force is currently focused on are aimed at increasing public satisfaction, tackling antisocial behaviour, reducing vehicle crime, protecting vulnerable people and reducing burglary.

It's the Chief Constable's job to make sure the day-to-day policing of our City Region is focused in a way which makes sure these priority areas, and all the other elements of policing delivery, are covered. As a Police Authority, it's our role to make sure the Chief Constable is providing a good police service which is not only efficient and effective but also represents value for money.

We do this by robustly scrutinising and challenging every aspect of GMP and we've got a host of arrangements in place which help us do this. For example, in the area of burglary, the monthly performance sessions we have with chief officers provided us with an opportunity to challenge performance in this area when we felt it was unsatisfactory. The Force responded with a range of measures including dedicated operations and performance improved. Our regular committee meetings are another important tier of our arrangements because they allow us to look at a particular issue in depth. This often leads to changes being made in the way the Force does things so you receive a better, value for money service in areas such as call handling.

This is just a snapshot of some of the ways your Police Authority is working on your behalf to ensure you receive a continuously improving police service. We use a range of measures to gauge our effectiveness and although statistics relating to performance only provide one viewpoint, they can be helpful in providing a focus and driving improvements.

Last year (2009/2010), of the 13 targets we set for the Force, six were met, four were within 10% of being met and three were missed. These facts and figures helped us identify areas where improvement was needed and this year it's a completely different story. GMP is on track to meet every one of its targets and just recently Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabularies praised GMP for its performance. I hope you agree, that's certainly something to feel proud of.

GMPA Chairman
Cllr Paul Murphy

For detailed information about GMP performance visit www.gmp.police.uk

MONEY MATTERS

Did you know GMPA is responsible for the police budget in Greater Manchester? This means the Authority decides how much council tax local people should pay for policing and has the final say on how the police budget can be used. This is an extremely important role and in recent years it has seen the Authority provide new police buildings, extra officers in neighbourhoods and increased investment in serious and organised crime.

Similar to many other public sector organisations, GMPA and GMP are facing significant budget pressures over the next four years. Around £134m of savings must be made and all areas of business are feeling the impact.

The largest cost for the Force is that of people, police officers and police staff, and inevitably, the only way savings on such a massive scale can be made is through a reduction in posts and job losses in addition to changing the way we work and how we do things so efficiencies are made.

Understandably, this is difficult not only for the staff and officers affected but also local people. This is something the Authority and Force do not underestimate and at all times, as workforce development plans evolve and adapt, protecting the frontline remains paramount.

YOUR GMPA

GMPA is made up of 19 Members. Ten Members are elected local councillors, one from each district in Greater Manchester. Nine are Independent Members who are recruited and appointed by the Police Authority. Cllr Paul Murphy is the GMPA Elected Member for Manchester and also the Chairman of the Police Authority.

For a full list of GMPA Members or to find out more about the Authority visit www.gmpa.gov.uk or

Write to: GMPA
Salford Civic Centre
Chorley Road
Swinton
M27 5DA

Email: info@gmpa.gov.uk

Phone: 0161 793 3127

POLICING IN SALFORD

Greater Manchester Police Authority is an independent body which scrutinises and challenges the work of Greater Manchester Police to ensure the service delivered by the Force represents value for money for the people and visitors of Greater Manchester

GMPA IN ACTION

Each year my colleagues and I at Greater Manchester Police Authority set your police force challenging targets. The targets are always linked to priority areas which have been highlighted by you and a range of other important partners. Last year (2009/2010) those priorities fell in the areas of public confidence, customer service, crime such as burglary and serious violent crime. This year (2010/2011), similar issues emerged through consultation and the areas the Force is currently focused on are aimed at increasing public satisfaction, tackling antisocial behaviour, reducing vehicle crime, protecting vulnerable people and reducing burglary.

It's the Chief Constable's job to make sure the day-to-day policing of our City Region is focused in a way which makes sure these priority areas, and all the other elements of policing delivery, are covered. As a Police Authority, it's our role to make sure the Chief Constable is providing a good police service which is not only efficient and effective but also represents value for money.

We do this by robustly scrutinising and challenging every aspect of GMP and we've got a host of arrangements in place which help us do this. For example, in the area of burglary, the monthly performance sessions we have with chief officers provided us with an opportunity to challenge performance in this area when we felt it was unsatisfactory. The Force responded with a range of measures including dedicated operations and performance improved. Our regular committee meetings are another important tier of our arrangements because they allow us to look at a particular issue in depth. This often leads to changes being made in the way the Force does things so you receive a better, value for money service in areas such as call handling.

This is just a snapshot of some of the ways your Police Authority is working on your behalf to ensure you receive a continuously improving police service. We use a range of measures to gauge our effectiveness and although statistics relating to performance only provide one viewpoint, they can be helpful in providing a focus and driving improvements.

Last year (2009/2010), of the 13 targets we set for the Force, six were met, four were within 10% of being met and three were missed. These facts and figures helped us identify areas where improvement was needed and this year it's a completely different story. GMP is on track to meet every one of its targets and just recently Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabularies praised GMP for its performance. I hope you agree, that's certainly something to feel proud of.

GMPA Chairman
Cllr Paul Murphy

For detailed information about GMP performance visit www.gmp.police.uk

MONEY MATTERS

Did you know GMPA is responsible for the police budget in Greater Manchester? This means the Authority decides how much council tax local people should pay for policing and has the final say on how the police budget can be used. This is an extremely important role and in recent years it has seen the Authority provide new police buildings, extra officers in neighbourhoods and increased investment in serious and organised crime.

Similar to many other public sector organisations, GMPA and GMP are facing significant budget pressures over the next four years. Around £134m of savings must be made and all areas of business are feeling the impact.

The largest cost for the Force is that of people, police officers and police staff, and inevitably, the only way savings on such a massive scale can be made is through a reduction in posts and job losses in addition to changing the way we work and how we do things so efficiencies are made.

Understandably, this is difficult not only for the staff and officers affected but also local people. This is something the Authority and Force do not underestimate and at all times, as workforce development plans evolve and adapt, protecting the frontline remains paramount.

YOUR GMPA

GMPA is made up of 19 Members. Ten Members are elected local councillors, one from each district in Greater Manchester. Nine are Independent Members who are recruited and appointed by the Police Authority. Cllr David Lancaster is the GMPA Elected Member for Salford.

For a full list of GMPA Members or to find out more about the Authority visit www.gmpa.gov.uk or

Write to: GMPA
Salford Civic Centre
Chorley Road
Swinton
M27 5DA

Email: info@gmpa.gov.uk

Phone: 0161 793 3127